Sarah Marossy has been on a crusade.

And her mission — to improve children's eye and vision health by teaching parents, school nurses and educators about early screening — has earned her national recognition.

Dr. Marossy, a Liberty Lake resident and owner of Post Falls Optometric Physicians, recently was named the "National Young Optometrist of the Year" by the American Optometric Association.

Marossy, 34, also was Idaho's "Optometrist of the Year" in 2008, selected for her public service and leadership by the Idaho Optometric Physician's Association.

She founded in 2007 the Idaho Children's Vision Coalition, which is dedicated to saving children's vision through educational resources, preventative care initiatives and collaborations with agencies and schools. So far, Marossy has secured more than $45,000 in grants and private donations for her efforts.

She also recently was appointed to serve on the Idaho Commission for the Blind and Visually Impaired.

Marossy sat down with The Splash this week to talk about the national honor and her passion for vision.

Q. How did you react when you first heard the news that you had been named?

A. I thought it was a prank call when they first called. It was 7 o'clock at night. When they said, "This is the president of the American Optometric Association and I want to be the first to call you," I thought this is someone pulling my leg. I'm glad I didn't hang up. ... I knew I was up for the award, (but) there are 50 states involved. Idaho has never won anything on the national level. There is a lot of competition. The only two states west

Carla Hermann and Julie Long, staff members from Legacy Animal Medical Center, place a toilet in the yard of Mayor Wendy Van Orman last week.

Toilet raises funds for cancer

For the past couple of weeks, toilets decorated with flowers and pink flamingos have mysteriously appeared in local residents' yards.

While some people believe it to be a prank at first, the sign attached to the toilet explains that it is part of the Relay for Life fundraising efforts by the staff of Legacy Animal Medical Center, 1318 N. Stanford Lane in Liberty Lake.

In the two weeks since the fundraiser began, Office Manager Julie Long said more than $300 has been raised toward the goal of $3,000 for cancer research.

For $10, staff from the veterinary center will pick up the toilet and haul it away. People can pay $20 to have it hauled to a friend's house or $30 for staff to pick it up and guarantee it won't come back to their yard again.

The staff is planning to continue the toilet fundraiser until June 11, in addition to hosting other fundraisers such as a car wash, yard sale and collecting donations for the luminaries that will be displayed during Relay for Life on June 11-12 at East Valley High School. All funds raised go to the American Cancer Society for cancer research.

If people would like to request a toilet to be placed in someone's yard, they can contact Legacy at 926-8387.

Those wanting to make a donation toward luminaries can do so in the veterinary office or by visiting www.legacyamc.com and clicking on the Relay for Life link.

Police Report

The following incidents, arrests, calls for service and citations were reported by the Liberty Lake Police Department for April 26-May 3.

Arrests and incidents:

• DUI and reckless driving — A 17-year-old Valleyford male was arrested in the early morning on April 25 on Country Vista Drive and Liberty Lake Road for driving under the influence, reckless driving, possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia. The officer saw the vehicle driving recklessly in excess of 85 mph on Country Vista. Upon search of the driver, the officer found the drug and smoking device in his pocket. The juvenile told the officer there was more marijuana in the car and admitted he had been drinking earlier.

• Garbage — Police noticed April 26 a large amount of household garbage dumped alongside the road on the 20100 block of East Indiana. By locating several pieces of discarded mail, the officer determined the owner lives in Spokane Valley and contacted the resident. The resident said the 19-year-old son was supposed to take the garbage to the dump and made arrangements for it to be picked up.

• Reckless driving — A 65-year-old Spokane man was arrested April 26 at Harvard and Mission for reckless driving. The officer saw the vehicle making several sudden lane changes, causing another vehicle to swerve and rapidly brake to avoid a collision. The subject told the officer he didn't know where he was going and was listening to directions from a passenger in the vehicle, police said.

• Backyard car crash — A vehicle traveling northbound on Molter Road April 26 left the roadway, struck a tree in the median, hit a street sign on the west side of the road, crossed the sidewalk, hit a residential fence and then hit a gazebo in the backyard of a home on the 1300 block of North Molter. A witness told police the driver appeared to be passed out. Police didn't find any evidence of alcohol and believe it may have been a medical problem. The driver was taken by ambulance to Valley Hospital.

• Domestic violence — A 28-year-old Liberty Lake man was arrested April 30 for domestic violence assault and interfering with the reporting of domestic violence. Officers were dispatched for a hang-up 911 call on the 22000 block of East Country Vista Drive. They determined the suspect pushed the victim and caused her to fall. When the victim tried to call 911, the suspect unplugged the phone from the wall, according to the police report.

• Drugs — A 27-year-old Newman Lake woman was arrested May 1 at Interstate 90 and Country Vista Drive for unlawful possession of a controlled substance, driving with a suspended license, possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia. She initially was stopped for expired vehicle registration. The suspect told the officer there were drug-smoking devices and marijuana in the vehicle. The officer also found a prescription narcotic in the same container as the marijuana. The driver said she had a prescription but couldn't provide it.

• Rollover accident — Police responded April 27 to a one-car rollover accident on the 21100 block of East Country Vista Drive. The vehicle had been traveling eastbound on Country Vista, failed to negotiate a curve, left the roadway and struck a metal fence and an embankment, causing the vehicle to overturn and stop on its top in the parking lot of Country Vista Apartments. The driver was transported to the hospital. Police still are investigating the accident.

• Domestic violence — Police responded April 28 to a domestic violence disturbance on the 1400 block of North Meadowwood Lane. A married couple was arguing in a vehicle driving in Liberty Lake. The male was a passenger and started grabbing the steering wheel and yelling for the driver to stop the car. The female told police she drove toward Barlows Family Restaurant to get help. When she stopped the car, her husband got out and she told police she called 911 because she was afraid to let him back in the vehicle. The officer found the male suspect, who appeared to be intoxicated, trying to open the door of the restaurant, according to the police report. Due to his high levels of intoxication, he was transported to the hospital.

• Suspended license — A 33-year-old Post Falls man was arrested April 30 on the 22900 block of East Appleway for driving with a suspended license and an outstanding warrant for negligent driving. The vehicle initially was stopped for a speeding violation.

• Suspended license — A 24-year-old Spokane Valley resident was arrested April 29 at Liberty Lake Road and Appleway for driving with a suspended license and having suspended vehicle registration.

Skate park camera installed

Skateboarders, watch how you're rolling in Pavillion Park. As of last week, a new surveillance camera has been installed and trained on the skate spot.

Police — and the public — can access it.

The camera, a long-discussed feature for the nearly year-old skate park, cost about $8,000, which is less than the amount the Liberty Lake City Council approved for the purchase, Police Chief Brian Asmus said this week.

The wireless video remote surveillance camera can pan, tilt and zoom and also features infrared night vision, said a representative of Strain Security Systems, which provided the camera. The camera is installed on an Avista utility pole near the skate park. It's the fifth security camera in the park.

Officers can access the camera from their patrol cars, and the system also will record the video to be reviewed or used as evidence.

The public can access the video by visiting <http://69.28.35.2:8008>. The username is guest and the password is guest.

Since opening nearly a year ago, the skate park has been a popular recreation spot, but it's also received complaints from residents who say some skaters are partaking in illegal activities or causing trouble.

HUB earns nonprofit status

The HUB Sports Center in Liberty Lake recently received 5013c nonprofit status, and will pursue donations and sponsorships from individuals and businesses, according to a news release.

Donations will go toward the purchase of the facility and some operating costs. The HUB is working toward a $5 million goal to purchase the building, 8.5 acres of land and establish a capital improvements reserve, according to the news release.

HUB officials say that without a significant fundraising effort in the next few months, the facility will need to close.

The HUB, 19619 E. Cataldo Ave., is a 66,500-square-foot multiuse sports facility that features five basketball courts, two aerobic studios and open workout space. The facility hosts community classes, youth sports practices, tournaments and leagues.

Built in 2003, the HUB first was home to Sports USA, but it shuttered at the end of 2005. A group of churches agreed in May 2007 to purchase the facility from Garco Construction, which built the building. The purchase still hasn't been completed due to insufficient funds.

Liberty Lake library staff first in nation for certificate

ROGERS

She was the first library support staff nationwide to successfully complete the new program, which began this year, according to a news release.

Rogers began working on the certification when it was a new effort of the Western Council of State Libraries, an interest group composed of 22 states.

Rogers completed her library technician degree in 1994 at Spokane Falls Community College and started work in Liberty Lake in 2004. She also is president of the Washington Association of Library Employees.

LL has good Census participation

Nearly 4 out of every 5 households in the city of Liberty Lake mailed back a questionnaire to the U.S. Census Bureau, a return rate fairly standard among Inland Northwest communities.

The Census Bureau released its mail-in participation figures last week, and 78 percent of city residents were listed as returning it. This compares to a total Spokane County rate of 77 percent and 76 percent in Kootenai County. Among cities, Dalton Gardens (north of Coeur d'Alene) was tops in the two-county area with an 83 percent return rate. Spokane, Spokane Valley and Coeur d'Alene were all 76 percent.

Census workers will now be knocking on the doors of households who did not return forms, although the Bureau still recommends mailing back unreturned forms to ensure you are counted.

Comment on CV's bonds

The public is invited to comment on proposed Central Valley School District bond packages in a community forum May 13.

The 7 to 8 p.m. meeting will be held in the library of North Pines Middle School, 701 N. Pines Road.

The event is the last in a series of forums this year to gather feedback as the district works through a process to develop a 25-year capital facilities plan.

The district is proposing a total of six bond packages; the first includes the renovation of five aging schools and construction of a new elementary. The second features a new high school. The forum will include details about all six bond packages that will go toward constructing or renovating school buildings.

CV math teams dominate

Central Valley School District fourth-grade math teams dominated the recent regional "Math is Cool" competition, taking the top three spots out of 30 schools in the division.

Liberty Lake Elementary's team scored 69 points to earn first, followed by Sunrise Elementary and Chester Elementary, which each scored 57 points.

Six CV students finished in the top-10 in the individual contest, with Liberty Lake Elementary students Lacie Hull in first place, Jack Wampler in fourth, Bekk Martin in fifth and Lexie Hull in sixth.

Liberty Lake, Sunrise and Chester elementary schools have been invited to compete in the "Math is Cool Masters" state tournament May 22, according to a district news release.

CVHS students medal in metal at state level

Central Valley High School students recently participated in the Washington State High School Metal Arts Competition.

A CV senior, Rachel White, took home top honors for the jewelry division. Work from five additional CV students, including Liberty Lake resident Rebecca Kissack, was selected for the "2010 Passing the Torch" exhibit on display at the Washington State History Museum in Tacoma through May 23, according to a district news release.

LL approves dispatch contract

By Hope Brumbach
SPLASH EDITOR

The city of Liberty Lake has its first contract with Spokane County for police dispatch service.

The Liberty Lake City Council unanimously approved the contract at its meeting Tuesday.

The contract has been under discussion for more than a year. Before 2009, dispatch service had been free for small cities in Spokane County, including Liberty Lake, Medical Lake and Airway Heights.

According to the contract, Liberty Lake will pay an estimated $58,619 for the service in 2010. The fee is based on 2008 dispatch call numbers.

"It is a good deal," Police Chief Brian Asmus said Tuesday. "We get good service, and we obviously can't do our own dispatch for anything near that."

The annual fees will be adjusted based on call numbers.

In other business, the Council updated an ongoing discussion about improving a stretch of roadway near the Liberty Lake Golf Course that lacks pedestrian and bike paths.

Portions of the improvements at the Valleyway Avenue and Lakeside Road corner are part of the city's requirements for the Bella Lago residential project, calling on the developer to install curbing and a 6-foot sidewalk or a 10-foot pathway on the west side of the street once the city makes improvements to Valleyway from Molter Road to the east city limits, a project potentially scheduled for 2013.

Residents, however, appealed to the City Council for a quickened timeline to improve public safety.

City officials say the group representing the city, developer and nearby homeowners have tentatively agreed to a 6-foot concrete sidewalk that would cost the developer around $50,000 to $70,000. That would be a dramatic decrease from the estimated $200,000 improvement now required in the city's agreement with the developer.

The proposal would mean a quicker improvement, possibly even this summer, as well as connectivity with an existing footpath, city officials said.

The developer needs to sign off on the proposal, among other things, before the project can move forward, city officials said.

Itron goes to Washington, D.C.

BY SPLASH STAFF

Representatives from Liberty Lake-based Itron, Inc. joined President Obama at the White House last week in an event highlighting the results of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

Itron President and CEO Malcolm Unsworth, along with two Itron employees from different Itron locations around the country, were present at Obama's press briefing in the Rose Garden.

Itron manufactures smart grid and smart metering technology in two of its U.S.-based facilities, in Oconee, S.C., and Waseca, Minn. Both locations are benefiting from the administration's economic recovery efforts, according to an Itron news release.

Itron smart grid solutions were recognized in January by the U.S. Department of Energy for their contribution to the clean energy economy, the news release said. The acknowledgement came as part of Obama's announcement to award $2.3 billion in Recovery Act Advanced Energy Manufacturing Tax Credits for clean energy manufacturing projects across the United States.

"Itron is a global company with manufacturing all over the world, but we are one of the few companies in the smart grid space that can say, 'what we sell in America, we make in America,'" Unsworth said in the news release.

Budget glossary terms

By Chad Kimberley
SPLASH STAFF WRITER

The Central Valley School District budget process includes many educational and legislative terms and concepts volleyed back and forth. This guide breaks down the main terms used as district officials determine the final budget outlook.

I-728: Initiative 728 was passed by the Washington State Legislature in 2000 to route surplus state revenues to school districts to support high standards of achievement for all students through class size reduction, extended learning opportunities for students who need or want additional support and investing in educators for professional development. The I-728 funds amounted to roughly $1.5 million annually for the CVSD district and supported 20.3 full-time teaching jobs.

Certified staff: Teachers and administrators are considered certified staff. They hold a certificate from the state of Washington verifying they have fulfilled the educational requirements to be considered for open positions in the district. The I-728 cuts to the district result in certified teaching positions lost.

Classified staff: Other positions that require no state certificate for specific positions are considered classified staff. Classified positions in the Central Valley School District include para-educators, transportation, nutrition services, early childhood programs and technical services.

House Bill 2776: Before the end of the recent regular session of the Washington State Legislature, the Senate and the House passed a bill on basic education finance reform. The bill creates a new funding model that requires a phase in of smaller class sizes for kindergarten through third grade, increased funding for maintenance and operation costs and a new model for transportation costs. CVSD is looking at how the new model of funding will affect the district's future year budgets.

Levy dollars: The CVSD board of directors certifies annual levy amounts for general fund and debt service funds to be collected from taxpayers. Nearly 70 percent of the district's funding comes from Washington State, while roughly 16 percent of the 2009-10 budget came from levy dollars. Last year, the board of directors collected $1 million to help offset projected cuts in the 2010-11 school budget.

CV district considers multiple cuts

Budget news not as dreary as first anticipated

By Chad Kimberley
SPLASH STAFF WRITER

After giving a doomsday forecast for budget cuts for the upcoming school year, the Central Valley School District is somewhat scaling back the need for drastic reductions.

District officials are trying to minimize the impact on the classroom, and instead, are focusing on four areas for about $300,000 in reductions: nutrition services, transportation, the district central office and secondary athletics and activities participation fees.

Those reductions are in addition to the $1.5 million already cut from state I-728 funds, which go toward paying for certificated teaching positions, reductions in class sizes and providing additional learning support services to students at all levels.

The school board is expected to continue its budget discussion at its meeting Monday.

The proposed $1.8 million reduction is an improvement from the district's earlier predictions of needing to slice $2.3 million from the 2010-11 school year budget. District officials say they are using local levy dollars to shore up the difference.

"We realized we didn't have to make as many cuts," Superintendent Ben Small shared at a recent school board meeting.

Budget reductions have been a familiar tune for the district, which needed to cut $1.5 million two years ago and $3.4 million for the current year.

SUBMITTED PHOTO

CVHS golfer Danny Nimri hits off the tee at the Coeur d'Alene Resort Golf Course. The CV district is considering charging students extracurricular fees for participation in sports and other activities.

For this year's budget process, the district held a series of community budget workshops in which participants ranked 28 potential areas for cuts. The four areas targeted for cuts were ranked as having minor or moderate impact.

The proposed cut to nutrition services will save the district $50,000 and could involve increased lunch prices. The district last raised meal prices for the 2008-09 school year, when breakfast increased to $1.75 in all schools, and the price of lunch jumped to $2.40 at elementary schools and $2.90 in secondary schools.

The implementation of activity participation fees will create a savings of $125,000. The proposed participation fees include a $55 cost for high school students and a $25 fee for middle school students for each sport or activity they participate in. During last year's budget cuts, the district implemented a $125 fee for middle school football players, who now will pay $25, if the board approves the new fee schedule.

Small said that the district will present details on how the activity participation fee program will work and whether co-curricular activities will be included.

Board member Debra Long said she was against axing any extracurricular programs, because they serve as motivation for many students to attend school.

"Whatever it takes to get that child in the door," Long said.

The potential transportation cuts will "adjust and streamline bus routes," which could increase the walking distance for students and will save the district an additional $50,000, district officials said.

The proposed cuts to the district office will potentially reduce administration costs and could include departmental cuts and possible staffing reductions for a savings of $75,000.

The next school board meeting is at 6:30 p.m. Monday in the boardroom of the Learning and Teaching Center, 19307 E. Cataldo in Spokane Valley.

Golf team chips in to protect athletic program

Parents, players play defense with fundraiser

By Chad Kimberley
SPLASH STAFF WRITER

The Central Valley High School boys golf team knew the elimination of their program was one of the potential cuts district officials were discussing for next school year's budget.

Instead of waiting to hear the outcome — eliminating programs is now likely off the table — parents and players organized a golfing fundraiser to ensure the continuation of their program regardless of the decisions made by the district's school board.

Janie Smith-Briggs, a Liberty Lake resident and parent of a CV golfer, decided to help get a first-year fundraising event going.

"I have experience in fundraising and golf and felt that while I am not able to fund the program alone, I could at least contribute my time and experience to try to help save it," Smith-Briggs said.

The recent event was held at the Coeur d'Alene Golf Resort as part of their "Coeur d'Alene Gives Back" program in which the resort gives $25 for each golfer that participates in the tournament.

The golf fundraiser raised $2,400, which will help cover much of the program, even if the district chooses to keep it off the chopping block, said Liberty Lake resident Shelly Christensen, one of the event organizers and mom of a CV golfer.

"Regardless of potential funding from the district, we still incur additional fees for the program," Christensen shared. "In the past few years our head coach, Steve Rasmussen, has generously spent his own money to pay for team expenses."

Golfer Troy Smith said he was worried about losing the golf program and how it would limit his opportunity for a college scholarship.

"(I was) not happy. Maybe a little scared. Not everyone wants to play baseball, basketball or football," Smith said.

Smith's mother also said she was disappointed in hearing that the boys golf program was one of the possible cuts.

"CV has a very large population and many different personality types," Smith-Briggs said. "Our ability (or inability) to provide different types of school activities for our children is very important."

When Liberty Lake Community Theatre holds its auditions for "SuessOdyssey" this week, Jennifer Ophardt will most likely meet new faces as well as welcome back familiar ones.

Attracting a variety of cast members is one of the things Ophardt, president of the local theatre group, said she takes pride in.

"We've never had the same exact cast, as each play brings out different cast members," she said. "That's great since everybody brings something new to the table that they've experienced or at least want to try."

This week kicks off a busy remainder of they year for LLCT, featuring plays, musicals, a silent auction and holiday performance.

Auditions for "SuessOdyssey" will be held tonight at 6:30 p.m. and Saturday at 3 p.m. at the theatre, 1421 Meadowwood Lane, Suite 130. The humorous yet educational play, scheduled to be on stage July 22, 23 and 24, tells the epic story of Homer's Odyssey transformed into the style of Dr. Seuss.

New for this season is the theatre's dive into musical theatre, Ophardt said. On Aug. 14, the group will host a silent auction and showcase "Vocal Expressions" featuring everything

Group wants delay of Lancaster development

Property hotly debated on north shore of LL

By Hope Brumbach
SPLASH EDITOR

A local citizen group is fired up that a 3.6-acre lot on the north shore of Liberty Lake could go forward for residential development — even though the group has appealed the Spokane County Commissioners' decision to allow it.

In January, CAUSE, an organization of local residents concerned with development in the Liberty Lake watershed, filed an appeal with the Eastern Washington Growth Management Hearings Board. The appeal asks the board to review the commissioners' decision to rezone the lot.

In December, the commissioners approved a change from rural traditional zoning to a low-density residential for the property, which has been owned for more than 50 years by Liberty Lake's Lancaster family.

The county's decision went against the recommendation of the county's planning commission and against vocal opposition by neighbors and others, who said they were concerned about the precedent set by the rezone and the environmental impact of such a development on the lake.

Next week, the county commissioners are scheduled for a hearing on a development agreement submitted by Lancaster Enterprises LLC — which CAUSE members say is an unfair loophole that, if approved, will allow the development to proceed regardless of the Growth Management Hearings Board's decision.

"They could wait until the hearing board makes a decision," said Steve Shirley, CAUSE president and a Liberty Lake resident. "Our perspective is that they don't have to proceed. What's the hurry?"

From the day the appeal is filed, the Growth Management Board has six months to issue a decision, if the case runs its course.

Gary Lancaster, a representative of the family, said this week that the Lancasters are following a timeline set up by the "legal authorities that our group is working with." The family submitted a draft of the development agreement in January and a final version in March.

A low-density residential zone normally can include as many as six units per acre. But the Lancasters plan to subdivide the property for four single-family, single-story homes total, with one residence already in existence, said Lancaster, who has said that the property will abide by neighborhood standards and will have minimal impact.

"People like a spot and once they get here they don't want any changes," Lancaster said. "People want things to stay the way they were, but that's not reality."

Commissioner Mark Richard couldn't be reached for comment this week. In December, he said he had discussed the application with the county's legal counsel and determined that approval "met the test of the law" and thereby would not set a legal precedent. As far as a political precedent, Richard said the property is so unique it would be rare to find another that could be approved citing the same case commissioners used in this instance.

Shirley said the CAUSE group disagrees about the precedent-setting potential, and he's also concerned about the proposed Lancaster development agreement, which includes a 35-foot height limit for construction.

"The question has been how unique has been this property. It's not unique; it's similar to other properties on the lake," Shirley said. "It's scary because you can see what can happen. ... From day one, we've maintained it's an issue of precedent. Most people don't get this is the real deal."

Lancaster said the development agreement includes the 35-foot limit because it's based on county code. However, he said the homes would be single-story to abide by neighborhood covenants.

"It wouldn't fit the neighborhood," he said of taller homes.

from Broadway songs to oldies and contemporary music.

In addition, their first musical production, "Burger Town," will be on stage at the end of October.

"A lot of people said they've wanted to do a musical — to dance and sing," Ophardt said. "They are a lot more time-consuming to put on, but we've had a lot of people who've said that's what they want to do."

The script still is undecided for the Christmas play to be performed in December.

Ophardt said it's amazing to see how far the group has come since they first started planning more than two years ago. They recently held a theatre camp during spring break for kids and are currently holding free improv workshops for adults.

Liberty Lake Community Theatre's most recent production, "Check Please," broke an attendance record with more than 90 people at one of the shows.

"We had to learn from each event that we put on," she said. "We learned things that worked and things we needed to improve on."

The LLCT meetings are open to anyone who wants to ask questions or be involved in community theatre. The next meeting is May 19 at 6:30 p.m. at the theatre.

of Mississippi to win are California and Texas. No one from Washington or Idaho has won.

Q: What does the award mean to you?

A: I'm just excited. I think it's one of those things that you don't really think will happen to you. It's not something you aspire to do, but you aspire to be a good doctor and do things for your community. ...

I think (it's also) being a role model for women; there are a lot of women in our profession compared to the old days. ... Especially being a rural practicing female, just because you're from a small town doesn't mean you can't do things.

Q: Your awards have recognized your efforts with the Idaho Children's Vision Coalition. What prompted you to found it?

A: It was founded because it was a real need; I work with a lot of school districts and with Head Start and I realized there was no uniform vision screening in the school districts or Head Start, and there are a lot of children being missed. They are put in remedial reading or they are in the pediatric office getting medicated for Attention Deficit Disorder.

After years of working with local groups and statewide, (I realized) that no one really had a handle on screening children. What guidelines do you use? As a teacher, what should I look for in the classroom? As a parent, what should I be looking for in the home?

(Marossy worked for a year researching a standard for vision screening that she and other volunteer optometrists then presented in public and private schools to help with vision education, screenings and to provide necessary supplies. After a year of traveling all over the state, Marossy realized that turnover at the schools would take too much work and time. So she applied and received a grant to make a training video for the comprehensive vision screening assessment of the 3- to 5-year-old population. It is now finished and available online or on DVD.)

It's been an enormous work in progress.

You would not do this just because. There's an enormous amount of passion. ... You think, if it even affects one child and you save that child's vision for the rest of their life, then it was worth it.

Q: What is your passion that drives you to go above and beyond in your field?

A: Basically saving children's vision and not letting a child grow up without use of one or both of their eyes. It started from me being in elementary school; I was one of those children who was missed for several years. I have a significant prescription. No one ever came to my school. My teacher in seventh grade realized, this person can't see. How much farther would I have been ahead if someone recognized (the vision problem) when I was in first or second grade? My husband has a lazy eye and so he is not able to be corrected to 20-20 in one of his eyes. He grew up in a rural farm area and did not have a screening. He couldn't read or even see until second grade. He couldn't even do the alphabet. He has the highest and worst prescriptions known to man. He ended up being an extremely successful businessman, but look at how that early learning (was) impacted.

Before (children are) written off as stupid or lazy or a holy terror in their classroom, maybe there's a reason they're acting that way or not doing as well as they could.

Q: Tell a little about your practice in Post Falls.

A: (About) 30-40 percent (of our patients) are kids between the ages of 0-16. We get a lot of pediatrician referrals and for family practice. (I treat) ocular disease in general, that's what I specialize in. I like the interesting, difficult things.

Patients just think 'Oh, I need a new prescription.' We do that here. But we're more of a referral-based practice.

Q: Why did you go into the optometry field?

A: I started seeing the eye doctor in seventh grade and he became a mentor to me. I shadowed him in high school and college and worked there for a time. I was originally pre-med for undergrad. I kept coming back to optometry because I had someone who I knew very well and I thought he had the coolest job in the world. Ninety-nine percent of the time it's really a happy, rewarding job.

Here is an excerpt from a recent exchange between readers and organizers on the Splash's Facebook page about the cancellation of the organized Liberty Lake Yard Sale this year:

Shelli Dickinson: "I was the chairperson for the yard sale in 06 and 07 and I will say that we started serious planning in April. If they were to pare down the sale and eliminate the Artisans that would take a lot of the work out of the planning."

Starla Houck Thompson: "I really hope the community goes ahead with the yard sale....we love the day of shopping and taking advantage of the great deals... we drive 2 hours to the sale and it is well worth the drive."

Kimberly Griego: "Shelli, I started on this committee while you were the chair. We had several volunteers that made planning very simple. People weren't doing multiple 'jobs' to make things happen, so it wasn't like having another full time job. I know you stepped down due to other commitments and time constraints, but I am sure you remember all that it takes for the planning aspect ... You also set up the non-profit status of the board, and know we must have a minimum of five board members ... We have been trying to recruit help since February, but to no avail. There is simply too much to be done for only three people to pull it off ..."

Ann Weiler: "As the Chairperson for the past 3 years and a volunteer for 8 years, I have always wanted the best for this event and the city... Nothing pleases me more than to see it so successful. This year has been sad because of the lack of interest in available volunteers. I can only assume people have been just as busy as we have with family life. ... Again, we do hope there is renewed interest for 2011. ..."
